

Music that gets us in

Whether you stop...
OCTOBER...
...earthly,
...John Coltrane.
...of a woman's body."
...s Lisa. "I can feel the sound of the
...er of my body."
...Getz on the saxophone playing Brazilian
...s Michele. "Suddenly my boyfriend and I are in Rio,
...g in the sand!"

SPECIAL COLLEGE SECTION

GLAMOUR

gain
D...
Ch...
Kelle...
Georgia. "But when we were living in Wichita, Kansas, the grocer didn't carry it. I had to settle for a fix every few months, when I traveled out of town on business.

"Without telling me, my husband asked our local grocery store to place a special order for him. I got home one day and found 21 pints of my favorite Häagen-Dazs in my very own freezer!"

A BEDROOM HE'LL LOVE

Looking for a new way to make your partner sigh with pleasure? Redecorate, says Los Angeles-based interior designer Jackie Mazur. Here, some suggestions:

- Lighten up. "Many men love pastels in the bedroom," Mazur says. "They won't specify pink, but give them an array of colors and they'll point to it."
- Satin sheets? "Absolutely," says Mazur. "Satin is always sexy. And don't turn up your nose at flannel. He may not like it on you, but he'll love the coziness of flannel sheets in cool weather."
- Flowers are fine. "Many men enjoy a big, floral print," she says. But skip the dainty Laura Ashley patterns.
- Dim the lights. "A low-wattage lamp by the bed or a dimmer on your overhead light is essential," Mazur says. You can buy a dimmer switch at your hardware store and install it yourself. "And while you're at it, get some of those pink-tinted bulbs," she suggests. "They may seem corny or old-fashioned, but they set a romantic mood."

HOW WE SOLVED IT

My husband's love of fishing drives me crazy," says Pamela Sotomayor, a reader in North Bergen, New Jersey. "We have fishing poles under the bed, in the closets, in our car. There are nets and tackle everywhere—and worms in the fridge. Worst of all, Giovanni begs me to go fishing with him—then gets upset when I want to row to shore before he's spent his full eight hours on the lake.

"Finally we made a deal: For every time I go fishing with him, he owes me two outings. I take him to the museum, the mall, to visit family. So far it's working. While we were on vacation, we spent 10 hours deep-sea fishing (he caught a huge marlin) and then we went sightseeing. Much to his surprise, Giovanni ends up liking a lot of things I want to do, and I've discovered what's so addictive about fishing—catching that marlin was pretty exciting." Found a creative solution to a mutual problem? Tell us about it. Write: Couple Time, Glamour, 350 Madison Ave., New York NY 10017; e-mail: CoupleT@Glamour.com; fax: (212) 880-6922.

FROM TOP: CHRIS SANDERS; COURTESY OF MAURA KEILER; ILLUSTRATION: MONICA LIND